

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

The School of Interdisciplinary Area Studies

Departmental Lecturer in the Economy of China

SSD/277/E

Salary between £29,099 and £35,788 (with a discretionary range to £39,107)

The China Studies Programme in the School of Interdisciplinary Area Studies seeks applications for a full time, fixed term Departmental Lectureship in the Economy of China. The Lectureship is tenable from 1 October 2011 until 15 July 2012.

The primary functions of the departmental lecturer will be to assist in teaching, marking and supervision for the MSc in Modern Chinese Studies. Activities will include delivering lectures, leading classes, tutorial teaching, and marking class essays over the course of three terms each year. Duties will also involve: supervising or co-supervising dissertations, participating in the marking of extended essays and dissertations, examining, and keeping office hours for consultation by masters students.

Chinese Studies organises a range of lectures, seminars, workshops and conferences and the appointee will be expected to participate and assist in some of these activities.

The lecturer will also develop his/her research, and be encouraged to publish and submit research proposals to outside funders

The post is based at the University of Oxford China Centre, Woodstock Road, Oxford.

The School is looking for the candidate who most fully meets the following criteria:

- i) a doctorate in a relevant field (contemporary China and economics) or evidence that a doctoral thesis will be submitted by the starting date of the post;
- ii) a track record of research of international quality (including the publication/acceptance already of at least two articles), and the capacity to publish in international journals and with major presses in Chinese Studies and/or economics;
- iii) the ability to teach graduate students of high calibre, and to carry out student assessment;
- iv) teaching experience in relevant fields;
- v) the ability to supervise advanced degree students in Chinese Studies.

These criteria are also outlined in the further particulars, which can be obtained by visiting http://www.area-studies.ox.ac.uk/job_vacancies, or by telephoning 01865 284991. Applications for this post must include all of the following: curriculum vitae (CV); a letter explaining how the applicant meets the requirements of this post (these are described in the further particulars); and completed personal details and equal opportunities monitoring forms, which are available for download from: www.area-studies.ox.ac.uk/vacancies. Alternatively, applicants can request hard copies by emailing vacancies@area.ox.ac.uk or telephoning the Assistant to the Administrator on 01865 284991. Applications should be sent to: The Departmental Administrator, School of Interdisciplinary Area Studies, 12 Bevington Road, Oxford, OX2 6LH, no later than midday on 13 June 2011.

The University is committed to equality and valuing diversity